The Icon Splitter application was developed to be a small tool that will allow you to split ICO files. It basically loads an icons and lets you see the resources within. You will be able to select the icon to extract as a single icon file. It also displays the following details: - Number of icons - Data Entry Point - Data Length Here are a few of the icons it was able to split from the title screen (it was able to split from several other icons too). Note that this is not a clip art application, but a small (and unfinished) test application to show that it can indeed handle ICO files.

Influence of microstructure of zeolite L-lactone on the photocatalytic activity of TiO₂ under UV-Vis light. Synthesis of zeolite-lactone materials with different microstructures such as straight, dimer and trimer forms was carried out with the aim of obtaining materials of high-performance for the degradation of organic compounds. The presence of the structural defect on the zeolite-lactone, as a structural modification, leads to interesting characteristics such as the production of methoxy groups, the presence of a new band in the UV-Vis spectrum corresponding to the OH group, and the increase in the photocatalytic activity under UV-Vis irradiation. The presence of water molecules adsorbed on the zeolite-lactone causes a blue shift of the transmittance band. The diffraction patterns of the samples show a narrow band centered at $2\theta = 7.83^\circ$ (002), with diffraction planes indicated for α -Al₂O₃, which indicates the formation of an alumina layer on the surface of the zeolite-lactone. The microstructure of zeolite-lactone materials, along with the crystalline phase of the solid solution, changes from straight to dimer and trimer forms. The chemical composition of the catalysts was analyzed by X-ray diffraction, energy-dispersive X-ray spectroscopy, X-ray photoelectron spectroscopy, Raman spectroscopy and solid-state ²⁹Si NMR spectroscopy. The samples of the catalysts with dimer and trimer microstructures, along with the Si/Al ratio, have been studied. The photocatalytic activities of the zeolite-lactone materials under
