Everett Smith:I first learned of the The Plague through a friend who had been a devoted follower of the disease. Immediately, the player is taken back in time to the last days of the 15th century. The player will take on the role of a young man who goes to America to begin life in the New World. Your objective is simple- find a place on the colony ship to settle. A ship with a broken down engine was stuck in a web of lines and cables on the space station at the edge of the Solar system. You must use the power to clear the lines so the ship can come to the station for repairs. After clearing the lines, other features of the game will begin to unfold. The space station is around a year old and seems to be the only colony ship in the system. Why is there an engine on the ship but no vehicle and why are there these cables all over the place. The game takes place in real time and the actions of the player are what drive what happens in the game. You are joined by 5 other shipmates on the quest to find a place to live. Nathan Speers:Players are sent to seek out a lumber company for supplies to build a temporary home for them, and to defend themselves from possible incursion by monsters from the nearby forests. Kody Seidle:This is a survival / zombie apocalypse game. You take the role of a mother who must take care of herself and her daughter. You must find and protect precious resources that can be used to develop your survivors and bolster your skills. You will be fighting off monsters to make sure that you have the resources to survive.State College, Pennsylvania (PA)Estimated: $42,000 - $59,000 a year Please note that all salary figures are approximations based upon third party submissions to SimplyHired or its affiliates. on Pegasus - Part 34: The Epilogue "Hold," he said, "just let me look at them, and then I'll show you to the rest of the keep." Recovered and dressed in some semblance of his own attire, Sorin now stood in an upper room of the castle's keep, looking at the bindings on the inner row of doors. Unfortunately, the direct approach to the front and rear of the tower was well within the range of the bandits. "Ring the bell," he called out, "but make sure it is audible for at least two blocks from here." He did not need to remind either the guards or the bishop. If the bandits were within that range, they would soon be paying a visit of their own. Sorin's only regret was that the bells of Esperanza rang well enough to be heard in the city, not the wild hills and woods of the surrounding countryside. He did not know that his own father had a ring forged for him personally to accommodate the bells of Esperanza, and that the metal for the rings were melted down and reforged for the four others who should accept the holy church and take up the mantle of the Seeker. Sorin's grandfather had thought it to be fool's errand, but he'd had a deep respect for his faith, and despite his oft-stated preference, saw few reasons to stray from it when it came to the church's matters. His father had simply adhered to what he saw as policy, as had Sorin's younger brother when he had lived, so Sorin, whose mother and father were both well and truly dead, adhered to them, too. The warning bells seemed to have a different effect than he'd expected. As the persistent chiming began to echo throughout the streets beyond, more and more people were on the roads, at least those that could make it here quickly. It was expected and not all that surprising that the keep gates would be closed, and some lord's seat before the gates, too, but this was a different sort of ordeal. He remembered the begging pilgrim's tales that came to Esperanza from there and from other such cities and towns, and from the post in The Seeker's cellars, but he'd never seen the overweening hand of the bandits reaching for his keep himself. It had never happened, but now it would. "Do I need to warn the city guards?" he asked abruptly, turning to his har

After a protracted battle, a new threat has emerged in Nexus. The deadly Aethera rifts appear, wreaking havoc and causing an escalation of Nexus's threat level. With the Nexus fleet leaving at any given moment, it is up to each and every inhabitant of Nexus to defend their home planet. The chaos gripping the mass of ships is far from a calm one. In Gemini, new Rogue-like gameplay where you'll discover a handpicked selection of disables and deadly opportunities of your own. Where decisions made by each and every individual player will eventually decide the fate of the Nexus. Every decision matters. A daily task system that will reward you and eventually allow you to level up. Hundreds of new options with more are still in the works. Much more depth and visual variations than in previous titles. Various environments, from frozen space to raging fires. On the CPU of the host computer, as well as on the cloud server, we use a solid CPU-numbering rule. This means you won't have to worry about overloading your system, as we'll never ask the host to do anything unusual. Any and all in-game settings can be accessed via the in-game config file. Customer Reviews: "Back in the day, right before the Battle of Earth day one, I was in a Pirates guild that was progressing at a decent pace for us on Mars. Then without any warning, we lost about 50 of our members to a very sudden and unexpected move - and I'm not talking about getting kicked from the server. We're talking about 36 hours. Some of our members actually wanted to quit during the day of their move, and I had to be diligent in keeping them on. "Two people from my original guild joined our new server, going by the names of Gemini and Leash. They were both new and easy to get along with, and in a similar position to myself and some other members of the original guild. We were on the Mars server for a total of 4 days, with Leash being on one server and Gemini being on the other, before the two were split up and they formed their own small guild - Gemini. "Both players have been doing quite well in their guild, and it looks like Leash and I, despite an admittedly lack of success ourselves, could be a perfect fit. We've been playing on Neptune for a while, while he's also been on the Mars server. He spoke up a bit about his strategy

One person has died and another 43 are injured, eight of them critically, after two passenger buses collided at a rural spot along the Seborpani-Bhiwad Kashiram Road. A teacher, 65, and a post graduate student, 28, died while 15 students and another two professors were injured. All the injured students were taken to Mahatma Gandhi Memorial Hospital in Phulwari Sharif. Six of the injured students are in critical condition. The injured students had been sent home as one of them was airlifted to Satara. Officials and staffers of the Kolhapur University central students' office have undertaken an investigation into the incident. The incident occurred when the two buses involved in the collision were coming out of Govandi Kaas water bottling plant on the Bhiwad Road. On June 30, a similar accident took place while a bus and a car were going out of Kolhapur Central School when they collided with each other along Rajhara-Chalanur Link Road. The injured in that incident were transported to KMS Hospital. On May 1 this year, a similar incident took place when a school bus and a car met outside Kolhapur central school when they collided. Seven students sustained injuries and were taken to KMS Hospital. On August 19, Jitendra Patwardhan died and three others were injured while a school bus going out of Kolhapur central school was involved in a road accident at the Phulwari Kashiram. The school bus, coming from an additional school for boys, had collided with a Tata 407D van while the vehicle was on its way from Shirdi to Phulwari Kashiram village.Q: Web Service Proxy Required?
