With Crack downloadQ: Doctrine2: CriteriaBuilder for id field By default Doctrine2 maps simple entities to tables, which define table name and columns. But entity classes don't include column names. So I can't simply execute query like this: $query = Doctrine::getTable('User')->createQuery('u'); $query->where('u.id =?', $id); How do I change that and get id column name from entity class? I want to get that field value for not modifying entity class. A: The class/table name for a simple entity is automatically set based on the convention your entity classes are following. There is no simple way to define an arbitrary column, though, as it must be maintained in the metadata, which you don't have access to. You could dig into the code, and add the column yourself based on the convention, though. Initial coin offerings d0c515b9f4
