In this section, you find out what the different types of graphic design programs are and how they may work. You learn how to find the one that will work best for you. Both beginners and intermediate graphic designers are like musicians who can play a variety of instruments — even compose their own song. As you begin to consider the unique position that graphic designers have in the business world, you may be inclined to spend more time looking at software programs and techniques and less time thinking about what kind of graphic designer you are. For now, you just need to know that graphic designers have to be knowledgeable about many software programs and techniques. Graphic designers need to be able to edit existing images using a variety of software programs, including Adobe Photoshop. Most professionals also work with a variety of drawing and drawing software programs, including Adobe Illustrator. The skills required to do graphic design are usually best developed through practice and experience. You can do an amazing amount of research on the Internet and elsewhere and still not master the best software and techniques. That's because the graphic design industry is constantly moving and changing. But you can still get a great start with a good graphic design program, such as Adobe Photoshop Elements or Adobe Photoshop, and a graphic design community that you belong to. Most people have never heard of the software programs used for designing electronic documents like Word, Excel, or PowerPoint, and they shouldn't have to. That's why you never see people talking about what they're using when they create a resume or a business plan. Graphic designers are not limited to working on paper only, nor do they have to use only one kind of software program. Most graphic design students use a mix of both print and electronic software programs to help them create and edit files. Many graphic designers also use a variety of programs. Knowing Your Graphic Design Programs Any time you create a new file from scratch (after you save a file from your computer), you're working with a new graphics file. For example, if I have an app called "photos", and I have these two models: Fredrick Yankup Fredrick Yankup is an American cinematographer and director. After a two-year absence, a new season of UCP and NSCAAU volleyball will begin in late October. The winter season kicks off with a 10-team co-ed tournament Sept. 27-29 at Ridgeland High School. The competition will be followed with the regular season Oct. 4-6, with two games at each school. Play will then resume in the spring and will culminate with a tournament May 18-20. Each fall and spring, "There's a different theme," UCP volleyball coach Randy Teeter said. "This year, I'm leaning toward the old-time baseball game theme." Teeter also has a couple new players coming into the league. Courtney Hathaway will join the Cardinals, while former walk-on Olivia Lambert has committed to the Bulldog team. "We're just looking to get stronger," Teeter said. "We're hoping to have a good team." The regular season will consist of four homes games, two against Lowndes County and two against Darlington. There are no league or league play for any team in this league. "We will have a league champion based on winning percentage," Teeter said.
