Enjoy the beauty of a classic solitaire game, with a twist. This is not the "classic" solitaire game that you've played before, nor is it like some other classic solitaire games. Instead, it is a board game mixed with many classic solitaire card games into one neat little package! You will play on cards that are made to look like the cards of the classic solitaire games that you know and love. What's New: This update brings with it the most requested feature: triple-colored cards. Triple-colored cards give the player a choice to play the card in a subtle and beautiful way. What's more, triple-colored cards make for some great gameplay and fun for the entire family. About This Game: Try your hand at sliding cards down to one-by-one. A pure game of skill, Tenacious will have you asking yourself can I beat the score. No strategy, no pot, just fun. How To Play: Each of the 15 levels has only a single card per level. You will slide the cards down by touching the top row while sliding the cards from the bottom row on the screen. You must slide the cards from the bottom row on the screen. Watch out for the octopus trying to snap you and drag you underneath the cell tower! The value of your cards will be added to your score. A full version is available on the web (for desktop). This version is free and comes with all DLC's. How To Play: This is a "surfing" game like Flipper, if you know that one. You use your iPhone to control a fistula and wave with your fingers to ride the wave of the sea. How To Play: Each of the 15 levels has only a single card per level. Today I'm releasing the game for Oculus Ready devices. As far as I know, Oculus Rift headset is the only VR ready hardware available at the moment. Unfortunately, Apple Vive is not - yet. However, there is some work being done on hololens and I think this may be the answer. Things may change, however.

Solitaire VR is a game for the Oculus Ready mobile devices. Currently there are no smartphones certified to run VR (soon there will be). Every Oculus Ready mobile device (phones and tablets) can play Solitaire VR game. Unfortunately, you have to have a 60Hz monitor and play at 90 degrees to get the most of the experience. On the other hand, I have tested the full version (without controller) on Samsung Galaxy Note 10.1 and it worked.

This game is released under the Creative Commons CC BY-NC-ND licence. That means you can use, copy, modify this game, make commercial versions and publish it free-of-charge under the same conditions as this licence. I'm happy if you contribute or share playtesters. At the moment I don't have the resources to support public playtesting.

What's new:

uses Fantasy Flight Games title information and art, and the "Crowning" gameplay helps take this to a new level. Don't be fooled by the VR listing, this title is not exclusive to it but players will find that it brings an amazing level of wow factor to the table. Pick up some hot dice and play a pretty cool game! United States in dangerous proximity to Kashmir. So far, though, India seems unperturbed by Washington's threats. And it still strongly opposes the idea that any American soldiers be sent to protect the Modi government's information operations officers operating across the state. "If troops are sent, there will be a military tussle on the ground, it will escalate, and Pakistan will also arm the local population against India," a Kashmiri serving in an Indian military intelligence division said. "That's the best-case scenario for them. It will make the mission extremely messy and difficult." Hodges, the former DIA officials said, would be a poor choice for the job in any case. The last time Hodges was in Kashmir, according to another former military officer in the Indian army and the current police chief of Jammu and Kashmir, he was "instigating the local population against them." Another "big D" Since leaving his post at the Pentagon in 2014, Hodges has actively promoted the private-sector use of military-grade computer network devices called "D-4s," or Data Distribution Systems. (The Pentagon in 2016 notified Congress that it may authorize the use of D-4s to facilitate the kind of cloud-based intelligence collection in which NSWC-Pacific has conducted its mission in Abbotsford and Hawaii.) Sherinian More In 2015, NPR reported that Canada helped develop the Radio-Frequency Implanted Chip, a small device that can be injected into targets' bodies to report information on their location, health, and movements. The secretive Pentagon program is much larger than D-4 and has so far recruited hundreds of agents among U.S. citizens of color, said an intelligence source who spoke on background. According to CNN, in 2017, for the first time, a technique known as "Quantum Insertion" was used inside Yemen by the U.S. in the operation that led to the death of al-Baghd
