If you're using js-builder, you're _already_ the beneficiary of some of the documentation and code found here. If you're wondering why we've built this website, read on... We don't have all of the documentation that we'd like, and the software is still in heavy development, so we're writing this website (as well as the book which it's mostly based on) to help make a complete set of documentation and the code we use as accessible as possible to js-builder users. Although many people use and love js-builder, the documentation is not available for all of its features or library. Although we can see why the documentation might not be available yet, we feel it's bad for people to use an incomplete or unsupported tool, so we're making it available and publishing the documents here. If you find an error or incomplete documentation page, please bring it to our attention via GitHub or send it to the `js-builder@googlegroups.com` email address. If you have any suggestions for other things we should document, please let us know! Feedback is still appreciated via GitHub (` email (`js-builder@googleg
