The present invention relates to a process for applying a coating of a metal organic compound (MOC) to a substrate by plasmaassisted chemical vapor deposition. Certain organic compounds have been used as a coating for substrates. The coatings formed from these organic compounds, however, have not proven entirely satisfactory for a number of reasons. They have been found to be very brittle. The coatings have been found to be difficult to remove from the substrate. The coatings have had insufficient durability. The coatings have had insufficient adhesion to the substrate. In many cases, they have not been applied in a controlled manner. A need has therefore existed for an improved process for forming a metal organic compound coating on a substrate. One form of the invention provides a process for coating a substrate with a metal organic compound by plasma-assisted chemical vapor deposition. The process comprises providing a plasma in a reaction chamber comprising a substrate and at least one precursor gas comprising at least one metal organic compound. The metal organic compound is deposited onto the substrate in a controlled and substantially uniform manner. A specific embodiment of the invention comprises providing a plasma in a reaction chamber comprising a substrate and at least one precursor gas comprising a triorganophosphite (i.e., a compound containing at least one P-O-C group). The triorganophosphite is deposited onto the substrate in a controlled and substantially uniform manner. Another form of the invention comprises a substrate coated with a triorganophosphite by plasma-assisted chemical vapor deposition. Another form of the invention comprises a triorganophosphite in the form of a coating on a substrate.NEWS Latest news for 2-week license exemption for laboratory staff On behalf of the Drug Services Policy Forum The Pharmaceutical Society of New Zealand is an independent, not-for-profit organisation representing the whole of the pharmacy profession to Government, regulatory agencies, the media, the public and other stakeholders. The Forum is the appointed peak body for the life science sector in New Zealand, and its role is to work with the Government and other stakeholders to ensure the quality of the life science industry in New Zealand. "The problem with many parts of the industry is that people who work in it don't understand it as well as they should," says Mr Miller. "People need to understand that what we are doing is really crucial to their
