A macro is a series of keystrokes that can be combined to create complex macros. You can set the appearance, or shape, of the macro as it is created and saved for future use. It is especially useful in the creation of complex keystrokes for performing repetitive tasks quickly, for example, entering in large amounts of data or mailing a document. Once a macro has been saved, it can be recalled using the open macro dialog which enables you to quickly create a new macro from previously saved macros. You can save the dialog as a macro and recall it from a macro control panel. There are also some keyboard combinations that can be saved as macros. Main features

MACRO creation is based on the AutoHotkey software, a powerful tool for programmers and users alike. What is unique about the dialog is that it automatically adapts to the keyboard layout, meaning you do not have to perform the macro creation process for a different keyboard setup. The window enables you to create a number of macro keys by clicking on the empty area and then typing the characters and symbols you wish to include. You can also record the keystrokes by pressing the left mouse button. What is more, the program offers different layouts, each containing a set of shortcuts that can be recalled with a single click. You may want to pick the Quick (one button), Smart (three button), or Micro (four button) layouts. Each layout defines a set of the most useful shortcuts and is based on a layout used by an AutoHotkey programmer. The programmer that designed the layout decided what combinations of keys were likely to be used by different users. Thus, the layout you choose will make the macro creation process easier for you. Each layout is designed to have a limited number of keys, so you will not have to spend a long time to create a reasonable number of shortcuts. Bottom line MACRO for Windows 10 is a useful tool for those who need to create a lot of keyboard shortcuts. The process is fast and easy, plus, you can create custom layouts with as many or as few keys as you need.
