That's what the IT team is working on this weekend. "Yeah, and the IT help desk is just frantic with it," says Chad Casamento, WDR's director of product management. "Whenever we're close to releasing a new version, it's the first thing they go to, and for the last few days, it's really been like an epidemic where they'll come in and ask if they're going to be able to download it." Casamento hopes to have the automatic updater make its way to the Windows Store later this week, but while it's ready, we're eager to take a look at what's next for the product. "We've been focusing on just getting the new features ready for the general release," he says. "We're a few short weeks from having a new major version, and we want to make sure we have the features we've been working on for the last three months." But that doesn't mean the next version won't be packing even more polish. "I'd say we're going to try to really push the next version to see how much improvement and new features we can get in," Casamento says. "We've got a tremendous list of them, but we've been making sure we can get in everything we can." Интернет работает, только не дома. Дом сайты сайтов russia 33 выше 6 в. Все годы здесь не обладают.
